McGruff® and Scruff®'s Stories and Activities for Children of Promise

From the
National Crime Prevention Council

Children will learn conflict resolution skills to better deal with tough issues such as peer pressure, bullying, alcohol and other drugs, how to maintain or establish contact with their incarcerated parent, and how to deal with jail or prison visits. Children will be able to identify and better understand their feelings and to look for help when they need it. They will understand that there are many people who care about them and want to help them make a difference. The stories are reinforced by activities the children can do with their families or mentors. (24 pages, Item C8)

Set of 30 comic-activity books, $24 plus shipping. Contact the NCPC Fulfillment Center at 800-NCPC-911, or visit our secure online store at www.mcgruffstore.org.

Mentor Guide for People Working With Children of Promise

A tool to assist mentors who work with children of incarcerated parents, this guide offers strategies to help mentors work with children between the ages of seven and eleven. It addresses the role of a mentor and how a mentor can be a powerful influence for good in a child's life. The guide will provide assistance, ranging from the mechanics—activities a mentor can do with his or her mentee—to the underlying issues—how a mentor can help the child cope with the substantial impact on daily life of the incarceration of his or her parent. (26 pages, Item M96)

People of Faith Mentoring Children of Promise: A Model Partnership Based on Service and Community

More than 1.5 million children in the United States have a parent in prison. A structured, carefully managed mentoring program can provide much-needed guidance and support for these children. This document uses Philadelphia's highly effective Amachi program as a model to show how faith-based organizations, secular nonprofits, and public organizations can work together to provide caring and trusting relationships for these children. (62 pages, Item M91)

Copies are $15.95 each, plus shipping. Contact the NCPC Fulfillment Center at 800-NCPC-911, or visit our secure online store at www.mcgruffstore.org.
