

Using Civil Rights and Civic Education to Improve Behavior

News

Saturday, January 21, 2006

County seeks to reduce minority incarcerations

By Jennifer Fernandez Staff Writer

Print this article

GREENSBORO – Guilford County leaders hope of disproportionate minority representation in the expanding training and reviewing policies.

School suspensions and juvenile detention center that imbalance starts early. Last year, 70 percent suspended from Guilford County Schools were minority youth represent 34 percent of the juvenile and Delinquency Prevention.

"This is a very serious problem," said Margaret A director of the Guilford Education Alliance, one belongs to Guilford County's Disproportionate M committee. "It is a problem that is not unique to is a problem that Guilford County can rally around

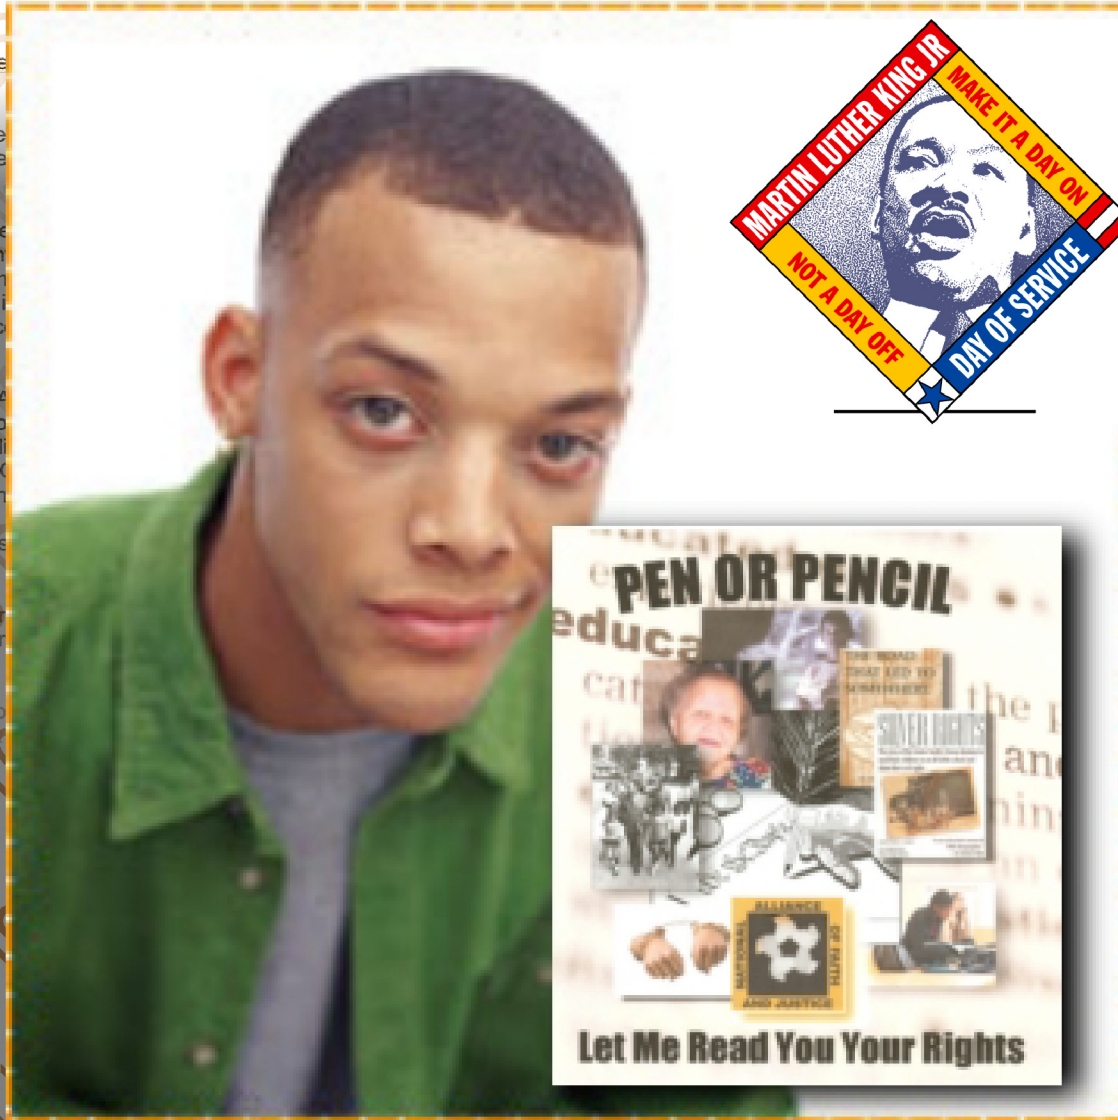

On Friday, the sheriff, school superintendent, just local leaders reaffirmed their commitment to the

The committee formed in 2003 after the county to address the disproportionate number of minor males, in the justice system.

Since July 2004, Guilford County leaders have b and interviewing families involved in the system

Now it is time to act, Arbuckle said Friday committee

January 15, 2007 10:00am - 2:00pm Washington Terrace Park Community Center High Point, North Carolina